FLOODS RAGE IN SOUTH AND WEST OF STATE

Cape Man Fined For Speeding On Malone

Howard Heuschober of Cape Girardeau was fined $5 and costs in police court Monday after Judge W. H. Carter had found him guilty of driving more than thirty miles an hour along Malone avenue.

Heuschober contended he was driving only about twenty-five miles an hour when he was arrested by Night Marshall Gid Daniels at 5 o'clock Sunday morning. Heuschober was found guilty on testimony of Mr. Daniels, who said he timed the defendant and discovered that he was driving fifty miles an hour.

On Monday Brook Arnett and Walter Mayfield both pled guilty to being drunk. Arnett was fined $3 and costs and Mayfield $5 and costs. Both men were granted time to pay their fines.

Thursday morning John Cooper, who is connected with the West Brothers' Amusement company, pled guilty to being drunk and disorderly the night before. He was placed in jail when he said he had no money to pay a fine of $3 and costs.

Judge Faris Rules Against NRA Wages

St. Louis, March 9—Ruling that Congress was without power to fix hour and wage scales for them, Federal Judge Charles B. Faris today denied the government's suit to force the National Garment Company and a subsidy, National Underwear Company to comply with NRA Codes.

Judge Faris cited numerous decisions of the United States Supreme Court in the written opinion in which he said he was constrained to conclude that no valid power lies in the Congress to fix by law hours of labor and minimum wage scales for employees of these defendants.

The court found that the two companies were not engaged in interstate commerce and had not elected to be bound by the code of the underwear manufacturing industry of its regulations.

Judge Faris found, from the Supreme Court decisions he cited, that high court rulings are "either squarely or in principle against the validity of a federal law fixing wages and hours of labor in private, intra-state business not coupled with any public interest."

The government's action was based on affidavits of employees in the National Garment Company plants here at Chaffee.

Work On City Garage May Begin Next Week

The Work of constructing a twenty-one foot extension to the fire truck garage on the east side of the city hall may begin Monday, C. L. Blanton, Jr., chairman of the Scott county relief committee, said yesterday.

A project, sent to Jefferson City for approval so that work relief laborers may be used on the structure, was returned since several minor details had been omitted. It is thought the project may be found satisfactory this weekend and returned here by the first of next week.

Twenty-five hundred yellow brick to match those used when the city hall was built in 1908 arrived here yesterday from St. Louis. The remainder of the thirteen-inch walls will be constructed of 5000 red bricks bought recently by John A. Young.

The fireproof addition will be set on a concrete foundation built this week by relief workers who also completed a concrete driveway from the garage to Center street.

Material costs for the extension will be about $360, Mr. Young said. On top of the garage porch adjoining the Dick Swanner's apartment will be surrounded by a railing. Entrances to the porch will be from a flight of stairs constructed from the ground outside the building and through French doors, which will replace one pair of windows on the north side of the apartment.

Legion park, constructing drives through the plots and marking off places where cars may be left by residents and visitors. This program, if it is successfully consummated, would relieve traffic congestion on Front street, sponsors believe. Shrubbery and trees now standing at the edges of these parks would not be disturbed.

The time may be even longer, he said, for the matter must be considered by numerous railroad officials before it can be either approved or rejected. Sketches showing the city's plans for use of the right-of-way were sent last week to C. F. Daugherty, a Missouri Pacific superintendent in Poplar Bluff and were forwarded from there to St. Louis, it is thought.

Under the proposal, the city intends to widen Malone avenue fifteen feet from Prairie to the Frisco-Missouri Pacific interchange tracks in the west part of town so that traffic on the highway may be relieved.

The Tuesday edition of The Standard was not delivered at the usual time, Monday evening, on account of high winds and heavy rain, but carrier boys were out bright and early Tuesday morning.

Conditions reminiscent of 1927 were discussed here this week as areas west and south were flooded by the Black and St. Francis rivers and as mild flood threats concerning the Mississippi were circulated after record rains fell Saturday, Sunday and Monday almost generally in this state south of the Missouri River. If there is no further severe precipitation, waters will recede after rivers have reached the crest stage.

SIKESTON, with a total of 6.09 inches of rain during the three days, was only briefly flooded as water filled streets and lots and covered sidewalks when sewers became clogged. No damage resulted. Residents who were forced to make trips were inconvenienced however. Between Fish and Dudley, the Missouri Pacific track was knee-deep in water until Thursday morning, and during that time, trains were routed west only as far as Dexter. Tracks on the right-of-way north of Poplar Bluff were washed out in several places beyond Williamsburg, and large areas of the track were under water. All northbound trains were routed over the Cairo branch until emergency workers who attempted to prevent water from covering the tracks east of Poplar Bluff were unsuccessful.

Farther south, near Kennett, 1000 men were working late Wednesday to repair and strengthen the levee and members of four national guard units, called out after Adjutant-General Harold Brown and Major Phil Love had made an airplane trip over the flooded sections, guarded the area between White Oak and the Arkansas line to prevent Arkansas from breaking levees as they did in 1927 and 1928.

While residents of lowlands vacated their property, workers placed sandbags and lumber and dirt at weak places along the levee. The crest of the St. Francis is expected to reach Kennett this evening. If it is as high as that at Fisk, water will be two feet over the lowest parts of the levee flanking Dunklin county.

National guard commanders followed the Black river from Piedmont to Poplar Bluff Granville Phillips, maintenance engineer of the division highway office, said Wednesday, then flew over the St. Francis river south from Fisk. After landing here, Adjutant-General Brown called Governor Park to tell him Southeast Missouri officials had not misrepresented conditions, and the executives ordered out units from Caruthersville, Hayti, Kennett and Charleson late Tuesday afternoon.

At Zalma a bridge was washed out. On Tuesday morning there was six feet of water on Highway 60 east of Poplar Bluff and Greenville. Near Patterson, Route 34 stood fifteen feet under water eight feet on Highway 67 at In numerous places, where water covered highways to a depth less than running board height highway workers led small groups of motorists over the flooded portions. Highway 61 was open throughout the endangered section.

At Poplar Bluff where records of rising waters indicated Monday that the flood would become severe, relief employees, emergency workers, and national guardsmen whose activities were authorized by Governor Guy B. Park, joined in helping more than 500 persons leave their homes in east and south Poplar Bluff. Almost all homes and business structures in those sections were damaged by water, which pressed through levees to inundate homes and farm land as the Black river set a new high record of 19.2 feet at noon Tuesday and rose further until it reached its crest sometime Tuesday night. Relief agencies were busy feeding and providing shelter for families driven from their homes in the worst flood known in the Poplar Bluff area.

With both the Mississippi and Ohio rivers swollen by rains, weather bureau heads predicted that a 50-foot level would be reached Thursday at Cairo and feared that the water would rise to a 55-foot level for which the Birds Point-New Madrid spillway was constructed. If only one river rises, Mr. Phillips said, additional water is pressed back into the other at Cairo. The situation is dangerous only when both rivers rise rapidly as they did in 1927 and as they are doing now. The Mississippi's crest reached Cape Girardeau Wednesday when officials recorded a 30-foot level. There was no apparent danger that the river would pass the flood stage there, but farther down the river opposite Cairo, ditches were still rising inundating parts of Mississippi county.

Meanwhile, A. R. Towsley, division highway engineer here sent one project engineer into each Southeast Missouri county to place in flooded areas bench marks on which the future road program of this district will be based.

Perhaps more serious damage was effected by St. Francis river waters, which broke levees in many places, flooding thousands of acres of land. On Tuesday night five breaks in the levee near Rombauer, Stoddard county, permitted flooding of the 15,000-acre Mingo basin, which government authorities are planning to restore as a game and fish sanctuary. Without time to rescue livestock farmers and members of their families hurried to safety, seeing all their possession swept away by turbulent waters.

Flood conditions at Fisk, somewhat relieved by the levee breaks in the north, remained serious. On Tuesday the river was rising at the rate of six inches an hour and even on the following day the rise continued until the river had reached 26.6 feet, the depth attained during the flood of 1927, and promised to reach 27 feet.

Farther south, near Kennett, 1000 men were working late Wednesday to repair and strengthen the levee and members of four national guard units, called out after Adjutant-General Harold Brown and Major Phil Love had made an airplane trip over the flooded sections, guarded the area between White Oak and the Arkansas line to prevent Arkansas from breaking levees as they did in 1927 and 1928.

Matthews Resident Dies After Operation in Cape

Mrs. Eva Maude Mainord, a native of New Madrid county, died at the St. Francis hospital in Cape Girardeau Wednesday morning, following a goiter operation which she underwent the day before. She was 46 years old.

Mrs. Mainord's body was brought in the Albritton ambulance to Sikeston, where it was prepared for burial. Funeral services will be held at 2 o'clock this afternoon in the Matthews Methodist Episcopal Church South, of which she was a member. The Rev. Hershel Yates pastor of the church, in charge, and Charles Byrd of Blytheville, Ark., and a half-brother, Alfred Byrd of Matthews, Albritton service.

She was survived by two daughters, Mrs. Reta Kellett of Sikeston and Miss Nadine Mainord of Matthews; six sons Charles, Roy Fred, Lyle, Courtney, Jr., and Wayne Mainord, all of Matthews; her father, R. H. Byrd of Matthews; her stepmother, Mrs. Anna Byrd of Matthews; two brothers Walter Byrd of Flint, Mich., and Charles Byrd of Blytheville, Ark., and a half-brother, Alfred Byrd of Matthews, Albritton service.

Additional money voted would be used for extending water mains in the northern and southwestern parts of town, where residents who have paid taxes for numerous years have been without convenience and adequate fire protection.

Waterline pipes, fire plugs and miscellaneous materials will cost about $10,000, according to figures compiled by C. H. Moose, superintendent of the municipal light and power plant. The remaining $5000 to be voted includes money for labor if the city is unexpectedly forced to hire workmen.

Under the present plan, labor will be furnished from the work relief roll. Although it is unlikely, it is possible that relief funds might be suddenly stopped by April, and if residents had voted only $10,000 there would be no money left for labor costs. The additional $5000 was included in the bond issue ordinance as a safety measure. Only enough bonds to cover total costs will be issued.

Realization of the advantages of voting the bond issue now was shown in answers given by Sikeston citizens. The knowledge that Sikeston is rapidly growing, and that more than at any time, require city improvements may be done at comparatively little cost and an awareness that expansion of facilities for homes and factories is necessary for the welfare of Sikeston, were renounced by residents.

Speaking of the issue, Dr. Presnell said, "It is almost imperative that we approve the bonds. We must have the money to make extensions so that we may expand." Some persons, favoring the issue, asked that they remain anonymous. Most residents however, are actively supporting it. Representative statements are printed below.

Mrs. C. C. White—The town needs it. The town is growing. We can have the work done cheaper now than at any other time. We'd better take advantage of this opportunity while we have the chance.

F. D. Lair—I think it will be apparent to everyone that if Sikeston is to grow and expand water and sewage facilities must be placed throughout the town. If any city in the district is going forward it is Sikeston. People are clamoring for houses and apartments, and are almost unable to find even a place to sleep. But before we have new homes we must provide ordinary facilities. Water systems are of primary importance, for sanitary reasons as well as comfort.

Mrs. G. A. Dempster—I think it's the proper thing to pass the bond issue because of present conditions and because of the chief purpose for which sponsors want it approved. If such moves aren't made the city will never progress.

Harry Young—I'm for the bond issue because we can't sit still; we have to grow. And we can grow only as we expand. I'm for it because extending the water lines will provide service in residential districts where property owners haven't previously had facilities, and in the new north addition, in which new houses will soon be built.

Mrs. R. H. Wagner—We need to pass the bond issue for further growth of the city. It will bring more factories here and enable property owners to build houses. There are still many places even without fire protection.

Mrs. J. M. Massengill—Yess I favor it. I'm for anything that will benefit Sikeston.

Lee Bowman—It must be passed if industries are to come here.

Mrs. Ruth Malone—it's the thing to do. Passing the bond issue will give men work and will place water and sewer lines where they are needed.

John G. Powell—I don't think there's any question about the passage of the bond issue. You'll scarcely find any opposition. It should certainly be voted.

Leveling Work to Begin at Mill Site Next Week

Preparation of ground for the buildings to be erected on the site of the Sikeston Cotton Oil Mill will be started next week, according to P. B. Bartmess, an executive of the Mississippi Cotton Seed Products Company in Cairo, who was here Thursday to plan work. Mr. Bartmess will be manager of the Sikeston plant.

Some time will be required to level now gently rolling ground and to excavate for five buildings, Mr. Bartmess said. Dirt must be moved, also, from part of the south side of the lot adjoining a gravelled road so that a driveway may be constructed for trucks bringing cotton seed to the mill.

To build a switch in a northwesterly direction from the Missouri Pacific tracks to the cotton oil mill railroad workers must fill in ground where the track will cross the road, cut down to a place below the level of the main line and the ground on which the mill will be located. Permission for this work was granted by the Scott county court.

The factory will require five steel and concrete buildings. In the south part of the tract east of town a three-room office will be placed. This structure will be joined by large scales on which truck loads of cotton seed will be weighed before they are left at the mill.

Concluding this study, the students made children's clothes.

Residents may see these toys and garments while they are displayed in a window of the Missouri Utilities building on Center street between Friday and Monday.

West Brothers Carnival To Open Here Saturday

Emerging from winter quarters at Morley, the main part of the West Brothers' Shows was brought here Tuesday, and workmen began preparing the Edmondson lot on South Kingshighway for the carnival opening on Saturday.

Portions of the group have come here from winter quarters in other places nearby for their first public appearance this spring. The carnival will be open for eight days from Saturday until March 23. Sponsors are officials of the Sikeston baseball park association.

When anyone tells you there are no politics in the office of County School Superintendent they are just giving you a bunch of hooey, not Huey. The present superintendent of Scott County was elected as a Republican, is a Republican and may be elected again as a Republican. B. I. Howard is a candidate for Superintendent of Schools on the Democratic ticket and can be elected on that ticket if the Democrats turn out at the April election. This is saying nothing against Frank Anderson, who is a high type gentleman, but he has held the office two terms as a Republican and now a Democrat wants the office.

D. A. R. TO MEET WITH MRS. OLD FRIDAY

Garden time is close at hand, and it is to be hoped that our readers will try to have better gardens this year than ever before for no other thing on the farm pays such big returns. And talking of gardens, why not beautify your home premises with a few shrubs and flowers this spring if you can spare the little they cost? I cannot remember the time when I didn't love flowers, and on my farm we have several big peony patches which are a wonderful sight during May, and also I have planted many hardy roses, hydrangeas, lilacs and other hardy flowers, and while there is no occasion for the average farmer to incur as great an outlay as I have, yet several hardy ever-blooming roses such as Pink and Red Radiance and Gruss and epithet, and a small space given to zinnias, marigolds, gladiolas, asters, irises, etc., will prove a great joy and cost very little, and then why not plant some hollyhocks along the garden fence or in the back yard? Also if you need some shade trees why not go into the woods and seek out some young elms or sugar maples? It is a mistake for farmers to dismiss flowers, shrubs, etc., as "mere sentiment," and especially if they have children growing up, for what child does not love a pretty home? The more we cultivate a love of a beautiful, the more our thoughts are lifted to higher things, and the better we can endure the hardships of life, and the more we are qualified to appreciate the demand economic justice for ourselves and our loved ones.—William Hirth.

The editor is in receipt of a letter from Lexington, Miss., informing us of the approaching marriage of May Emily Pepper, handsome daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dan Pepper former citizens of Sikeston. Miss May graduated from the Sikeston High school while her intended husband, Robert Mills Stephenson, Jr., received his education at Georgia Tech and the University of Mississippi. We know nothing of the young man, but with his education he should be able to prepare a home and make a living for his splendid bride-to-be. Much happiness to them.

HOUSE FURNISHINGS

Our 37 Year in S. E. Mo.

NOW IS THE ACCEPTED TIME TO BUY FURNITURE

This is to repeat to furniture buyers far and near that the values being offered in our Remodeling Sale are not mere so-called "specials" to stimulate buying activity but over 90 per cent of the immense stock under this roof is in the cut price list.

Sales so far have been far beyond our expectations—proving conclusively that dependable merchandise at lower cost than usual with first class service thrown-in—is strong with the public.

SALE EXTENDED A FEW DAYS

Because of death in the family of our contractor he will not be able to start alterations in the building until probably March 20th. Our sale and floor arrangement therefore will roll along "as is" until he is ready.

Listen in on KFVS at 9:45 every morning for further furniture news.

An announcement of importance relative to future policies will reach you over the air and in the papers within the next few days. Keep an eye open for it.

According to Rev. H. S. Holey, pastor of the Blodgett Methodist Church, twenty-nine additions have been made to his church during the past week in a revival campaign which he is conducting, assisted by Rev. J. C. Montgomery, pastor of the Jackson Methodist church. Rev. Holey reports good congregations, and states that Rev. Montgomery has been delivering some wonderful sermons. His subject tonight, will be "Christ, the Redeemer." The meeting which has been in progress since a week ago last Monday will close tonight.

TELLS OF COTTON CONTRACT

Cotton producers in Scott county who have signed AAA contracts are reminded by County Agent Furry that rented acres must be representative of the area cultivated by the producer this year in order to establish compliance with the cotton production adjustment contract. The purpose of the reduction of from 25 to 35 per cent in acreage is to achieve a similar reduction in production.

There is no change in the 1935 contract from the regulations of last year in this regard, and producers are not entitled to rent poor land to the Secretary of Agriculture under the cotton contract while planting better land to cotton. County and community committeemen will again give special attention to the rented land and will determine whether it is similar to that devoted to cotton production.

Contract signers this year may be able to avoid unnecessary expenditures by making careful measurements of the land which they intend to plant to cotton, before they actually prepare the land.

Last year it was necessary in some instances to reduce the number of planted acres in order to comply accurately with the provisions of the contract the producer had signed. If every producer measures his land accurately before preparing it for planting, and thus makes sure that he is complying with his contract, he will avoid the possibility of wasted effort and useless expense for seed and fertilizer.

Compliance with cotton adjustment contracts will be clased this year as it was checked last year. Rented acres, as well as those planted to cotton will be measured accurately and compliance will be certified only when it is found that all provisions of the contract have been carried out.

Night after night she sought adventure, romance, thrills—on the screen and then when it all happened to her in real life—she was the most surprised girl in the world! Malone theatre, Today.

In visiting the Dawson School last week, we observed that the board had just purchased a large Simmons Giant No. 224 stove, which is one of the largest stoves in the rural schools of the country, having a 24-inch bowl which is about one inch in thickness and is fitted with a groove so that no bolts are involved. This means that a new bowl can be easily set in place when necessary. This stove was bought from a local dealer in New Madrid and cost only $63.00. It has no jacket but the jacket from an old stove can be polished up and used again. Since regular jacketed stoves of this size cost from $125.00 to $150.00, you can see that this board made a saving. The school board at Dawson is Albert Ransburgh, Doc Hawkins, and Virgil DeBau. The teacher is Rexford Sloan.

Miss Georgia Allen, teacher of third and fourth grades at Marston, missed one day last week with an attack of rheumatism, which was the first day of school that she had missed on account of sickness in her fourteen years of teaching. She has been at Marston 7 years.

This week the Marston High School and Faculty is having a class basketball tournament, for which a small admission will be charged and used for the purchase of playground equipment. Music will be furnished by the Toy Orchestra of the Primary Grades which was trained by Mrs. Eleven Latimer Randolph. J. E. Sexton is superintendent and L. L. Wiseman is coach.

Our new high school supervisor, Byron Masterson, inspected Portageville, New Madrid, Marston, Risco, and Parma last week and expects to finish the county soon.

The Higginson School closed March 1, being the first to finish this year. The writer could not be present on account of teachers' examination, but expects to attend the final exercises of Wilburn on March 15 at 8:00 p. m.; Cade on March 22, basket dinner;

Union Grove on April 12, basket dinner; Farrenburg on April 26, basket dinner.

A peculiar accident happened to a good Sikeston mother during the week and she is now taking her meals from the mantelpiece. She was doing some family sewing and was called for some purpose, placing her work in the chair along with a sharp-pointed pair of scissors. Strange to say the scissors became point up in the chair and when she sat down on part of her work, she go up suddenly.

36 INCHES OF WATER ON HIGHWAY 60 NEAR FISK

Thirty-six inches of water stood on Highway 60 between Dudley and Fisk at 8 o'clock Thursday morning. The same day Mrs. Margaret Harper and Mrs. Clyde Phillips, maintenance engineer of the highway office here, learned yesterday from road conditions reports sent him.

The St. Francis river reached its crest in the Mingo basin at 11 o'clock Wednesday night, but water receded very slowly. The river gauge stood at 26.1 feet early Thursday morning, only .6 of a foot less than it was the night before. According to a report, Highway 60 may possibly be open by this (Friday) morning.

On Route 60 directly east of Poplar Bluff, twenty-two inches of water stood on the pavement.

While cars were permitted to travel over it slowly. The Black river gauge stood at 16.7 feet. Route 60, used as a detour south from Poplar Bluff, was clear by Thursday morning, but Route 6E also southern detour, had twenty-one inches of water, receding slowly. It will possibly be open by this morning.

On Highway 53, for about three miles from a point a mile and a half southeast of Poplar Bluff, three feet of water stood on the road and was receding only slowly Thursday morning. Part of the gravel has been washed away. Mr. Phillips learned, in some places as much as a foot deep. When the highway is opened motorists will be forced to observe one-way traffic regulations while workers repair the road.

SIKESTON WOMEN ATTEND M. E. MISSIONARY MEET

This week several women members of the Sikeston Methodist Episcopal church, South, have gone to St. Louis to attend sessions of the women's missionary council of the St. Louis conference and to be present at meetings of the regular annual conference missionary convention.

Kitchell, both of St. Louis, are officers.

At noon Thursday, Mrs. Arch Russell left by train for St. Louis, to attend council visitors' sessions held at the conclusion of business Wednesday. The same day Mrs. Margaret Harper and Mrs. Clyde Matthews drove to St. Louis with Mrs. Lacy Allard, Miss Florence Baker and Mrs. J. M. Pitman and her niece, Miss Frances Ann Newson. Missourians Activities in Washington

By Foust Roper

Washington, March 13—If your holding company stock is worth anything right now, it will be worth just as much after the proposed holding company legislation is passed.

That is about the briefest, clearest way to sum up just what this bitterly fought measure means to the small investor, according to Representative Reuben T. Wood of Springfield.

"Stocks which are not paying dividends now will not pay in the future, regardless of this legislation. They represent nothing but thin air," explained "Rube."

To Protect Investor

"The sole aim and effect of this bill," he continued, "is to protect the investor. It will regulate stock issues so that when an aged person or widow buys a share for $5 she will know that back of that share is $5 worth of machinery and equipment and other physical values."

"In the past many stocks were issued which were not worth the paper they were printed on.

"For instance, we have a light company capitalized at—and worth—$100,000 operating in a small town. A holding company acquires it.

"Now, the holding company proceeds to sell its own stock in it, notwithstanding the fact that stock up to the company's actual value was already issued when this small operating concern was organized. In other words, uncured, additional stock was sold in an enterprise actually worth only $100,000 originally issued.

"But that was only the beginning! Larger holding companies on up the line successively acquired the property and each company issued new stock in it. There could be unlimited issues of stock pyramided on our original $100,000 property.

Consumer Hit, Too

"Such swindling robbed not only the investor but also the consumer. The little company could have charged most reasonably for its power and still have made a good profit if it had only its true value of $100,000 to support. But it had to set extortionate rates to render the tribute each of the holding companies extracted from it.

"Naturally, this bubble was bound to burst. It did, and today many stocks are down to nothing on the market and are paying no dividends. And it has all come about purely because there was nothing behind the stocks.

"And now, every day, letters from small investors are pouring into every office here asking that this bill be defeated. We have the ironical spectacle of victims pleading with congress for the very crooks who sold them watered stocks.

Giving False Hope

"Fly-by-night companies are telling stockholders that dividends about to be declared for the first time in several years cannot be paid if this law is enacted.

"That is a cruel lie. If they haven't been able to pay all along, defeat of this bill will not bring money magically pouring forth. There is no more heinous crime than that of engendering hope in the hearts of desperate people, which is what these companies are doing now.

"There are, of course, some firms which have sold only sound stocks. These securities are paying dividends now and will pay just the same after passage of the bill now before congress. Only the swindlers will suffer.

No Harm to Investors

"There has been every attempt to paint this legislation as a blow at the investor. That is bunk! Those who are holding worthless bonds have already lost their money; they lost it several years ago.

"This bill will prevent investors from being cheated in the future. It will guarantee the value of stocks—there will be physical assets behind them or they will not be sold.

"Mr. Insull has been quoted as saying his mistakes were of the head and not of the heart.

"If that is true, Mr. Insull and all gentlemen of his sort should welcome this law. Under it, mistakes of the head will be prevented and the heart will be untroubled.

Miscellany

The Long-Farley-Johnson-Robinson-and-the-administration war is one of the strongest drawing cards the capitol has ever had. Corridors of the building are lined with those seeking gallery seats, and most members of the senate have been sticking close to their desks in order to hear the nasty things that are being tossed about that staid chamber.

Senator Truman received more than two thousand letters one week-end, while Senator Clark, who has been here longer, was deluged with no fewer than five thousand. Most of the mail nowadays is concerning the prevailing wage question and the just discussed holding company bill. Townsend letters are gradually thinning out as the country comes to learn of the impossibility of the plan. Workmen are touching up the various parks about town, proving that Spring is right on us. It's no small job either, for Washington has 600 odd parks and open spaces.

DUST SEED CORN TO SAVE FROM MOLDING

Seed corn in general this year will not be as good as that normally used. In some cases farmers will use 1933 seed corn which, in all cases, is not quite as good as new corn and in some cases those using corn of 1933 crop will be below what they normally used, and may be more subject to molds and rots when planted.

It is possible to use a dust to treat the seed to reduce this molding and rotting after the corn is planted. In general this dust will improve the corn stand and the yield is increased from two to four bushels to the acre. It is, therefore, a very good insurance because on the average only two ounces to the bushel is required.

This dust is known as "Organic Mercury Dust." It generally comes in one pound cans which will treat eight bushels of seed corn. It may be obtained from drug stores and seed dealers in general here in Scott County and the cost runs about five cents per acre on the average.

The method used to apply it is to take a barrel or other similar utensil, fill half full of corn, add the right amount of dust, and slowly revolve it for about three minutes. Old milk cans are also good. In every case the can should be as tight as possible as the dust will work out if it is not. The principle behind it is to get the seed well covered with this fine dust.

FEWER HOGS

The outstanding feature in the present hog situation is the very marked reduction in the size of the fall pig crop (June 1 to December 1, 1934). The number of pigs saved during this period in the United States is estimated to be 48 per cent smaller than for the preceding year. The Missouri fall crop is estimated to be 64 per cent below that of 1933.

The significance of these figures lies in the fact that farmers cannot sell a greater number of hogs than the size of the pig crop will supply both slaughter and breeding purposes. This means that Federally inspected slaughter from April 1, to October 1, 1935 is likely to be no more than one-half as large as in that period of 1934.

The danger of woodwork warping, as a result of moisture absorption on the unfinished surfaces, can be largely eliminated by protecting the unfinished surfaces with paint that assists in preventing moisture absorption by the wood, such as a paint containing aluminum or zinc oxide. One or two coats can be applied, depending on the moisture resistance required.

National Traffic Speed

Having experimented successfully with a law prohibiting the sounding of automobile horns after a specified hour at night, England is to make the even more radical experiment of enforcing a national law which will limit speed throughout England to 30 miles an hour in all congested areas. Local communities will determine what areas they consider congested. The law becomes effective March 18. Part of the plan includes the installation of such warning signs and mechanical traffic guides as the Ministry of Transport may approve. The objective, of course, is standardization throughout the country.

Whether the plan will succeed is problematical. It is meeting vigorous opposition from the powerful Royal Automobile Club and from many communities. One of the difficulties involved is the multiplicity of authority concerned. There is bound to be considerable disagreement as to what stretches of highway come with the classification of congested and what should be exempted. The confusion is not likely to improve the mental attitude of the motorists.

As an experiment, however, it is worth watching. Sentiment for standardization of traffic regulations is growing in this country. It is being urged by automobile associations and encouraged by police authority. That it will ultimately come in some form is unquestionable, but the problems involved and to first be solved before it can come are far more complex than those confronting the pioneering English.

After studying the English traffic casualty records one is inclined to wonder just what is the solution to the traffic problem. In this country a great many are inclined to blame a considerable part of the terrific annual death toll on lax laws enforcement. Yet England has strict law enforcement, and its traffic casualty record, comparatively speaking, is as bad as that of the United States. It imprisons its drunken and reckless drivers without regard to rank or power. It imposes severe penalties on even its minor traffic offenders, yet its traffic killing continues apace.

Its efforts at standardization is a further desperate step to reduce the number of fatalities. The English motoring public, in the main, will probably observe the congested area restrictions, but what will it do on the highways where only conscience and daring are the guides? Judged by its attitude toward other and earlier traffic prohibitions, it will do just what it is doing now—continue the chance taking whenever it thinks it can get away with it. —Commercial Appeal.

WHAT HAS HAPPENED BEFORE

Katusha Maslova, a poor peasant girl, was tried and condemned by Prince Dmitri Ivanovitch, and bore his child, which died. Driven out of her home community, she went to Moscow, and got into bad company. On the jury which convicted her of a crime which she didn't commit, sat the Prince. He tried by using his influence to get the decision reversed, but it was futile. So he went to her, begging her forgiveness. But seeing him again, only reopened old wounds for Katusha, and she fled from him. The Prince, in remorse over his lie by her tragedy, bid goodbye to the noble woman he was tratted to marry, telling her he, too, was going to Siberia with Katusha, to help mitigate the greatest crime man can commit against man; to love her, to die for her, to love her. Moreover, he felt again some of the old ecstasy in him, as he thought of his sweetheart, Katusha Maslova.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

The day of the departure for Siberia had come, and in the foul, smelly prison where Katusha was kept, all was activity. Even the ever-present rats had been frightened into hiding. Finally, the guards came to the cell which Katusha shared with four other convicts. They entered roughly, and in brusque voices commanded the five women to file out. As the door clanked behind Katusha, she knew it closed one part of her life forever. Well, she was not sorry; it wasn't a good life . . . selling what one should only give. But, she remembered those days on the estate, that lovely spring with Dmitri, those were indeed days of ecstasy. But she drove them from her thoughts. Silly memories! Girl! Dreams! Nonsense! There was no such thing in Russia. It was all work, or all pain, or all disgrace—for her class.

In the courtyard, she held out her hands for the shackles to be hammered on. They put her small fragile arms on an anvil, and a big man with a heavy mallet put the open rings on, and with two mighty blows, closed them. The woman behind her, put her hands out . . . and the woman behind her . . .

They were all chained to each other, and would be, for the long cold trip to Siberia. No chance to escape. But, why would one wish to escape? What was there to escape to? The torment they were leaving? Could Siberia be any worse?

Yet Katusha was a woman, and as she stood in the bleak court-yard filled with the clamor of ringing anvils and agonized goodbyes, she couldn't help but think of the promise Dmitri had made to her. He said he would go to Siberia with her. She remembered his words, and remembered, with a little pang how she mocked them.

"I'm trying to get you pardoned, Katusha," he had said, earnestly, if I succeed, well and good. If I don't, I shall follow you to Siberia. I shall follow you—help you—work for you."

Wronged Girl Relents

She had laughed at him, shouted at him. "You go to Siberia. There is no pleasure there. And money won't do you any good. Go back to your princesses—and your estates—and your silk shirts—and your soft bed—"

"If you go, I shall go with you," he said, quietly.

And she had raised her hands. How she longed to strike him then! But some strange feeling within her had restrained her hands. Some memory, perhaps, of what they had once been to each other. And in a strangled voice she had cried:

"Why have you come back? Why have you made me remember? I had forgotten you. I had been happy enough, and now—

Katusha's chain of thought broke off. The guards were shouting for the long line to move. And with those orders to leave for Siberia—chilling phrase!—Katusha, the cynical, hardened Moscow woman, once again, through some alchemy, became Katusha, the warm, naive, lovely country girl whom Dmitri had loved.

Frantically she looked about her.

The only other projects planned for counties in division number 10 are graveling and bridge work on Route SD north of Brasher in Pemiscot county and five miles of graveling on Route SJ, Bloomfield-Aid, in Stoddard county.

Throughout the state, sealed proposals are being requested today for the construction of a total of 287 miles of roadway. With the exception of 174 miles, which is being gravelled from maintenance funds, the balance, totaling 102 miles, is construction of supplementary or farm-to-market roads. Projects include 10 miles of gravel to be built from state funds at an estimated cost of $126,100; 174 miles of gravel haul or replacement, costing about $220,200, to be built from state maintenance funds and 27 miles of graded earth, 75 miles of gravel, and 2 miles of concrete to be built from National Recovery funds at a cost of approximately $100,000, will also be undertaken.

They were at the boundary line between Siberia and Russia. A wild wind shrieked across the desolate steppes. The prisoners—the few left after the horrible journey—huddled close together, warming each other. Katusha, however, stood alone, waiting for the order to move into the land where all was lost and forgotten.

She was numb by the bitter realization that Dmitri had not come. It was too late now, she knew. In five minutes, she would be gone, not only from him, but from the world. Few came back from Siberia.

Dimly, through the howl of the wind, she heard her name being called. "Katusha Maslova! Katusha Maslova!" Absently, she responded.

"Here!"

Prince True to Word

Then suddenly, Dmitri was at her side. His arms were about her. His lips were on hers! Oh! Could anything be so sweet! He had not forgotten!

"I am here, Katusha, with you," he was saying. "I have nothing now but you, and the promise of a new life. You can give me that new life, Katusha, if you will forgive me. Forgive me not only for the wrong I did you, but for all the cruelty and injustice of the world I have been a part of. How can a man truly live until he has tried to undo some of the wrong he has done?" His voice broke. "All that I ask, Katusha, is to live again with your forgiveness and your love and your help."

Then suddenly Dmitri was at her side... his arms were about her... he had not forgotten.

NEW TRANSIENT CAMP TO BE BUILT NEAR CHAFFEE

Plans for a transient camp large enough to accommodate 250 persons on a tract located in a rural area between Chaffee and Cape Girardeau have been formed, according to W. M. Hartnett, executive secretary of the Chaffee transient camp. The proposed camp is one of several to be erected in different parts of the state by the Missouri-Federal transient bureau.

Each unit will have about 20 barracks buildings, each forty by sixty feet, an administration structure, a dining room forty by 129 feet, a small hospital and a laundry. Material for the buildings will arrive at campsites in specified sizes ready for nailing and bolting.

When the new unit is completed, the Chaffee transient home will be used as a central office for several district camps.

GARRISON TO DELIVER LAST SERMON SUNDAY

On Sunday the Rev. Leslie Garrison will preach his last two sermons as pastor of the First Baptist church. Shortly afterward he will go to Vanduser, where he will conduct a week's revival.

This meeting, he said, will be followed by one of two or three weeks in St. Louis and by several revivals in Illinois towns. The Rev. Mr. Garrison will not conduct a meeting here before he leaves, as he originally planned.

Until the close of school, Mrs. Garrison and Miss Alleane Garrison will remain in Sikeston. Then they will join Mr. Garrison. Miss Garrison is a member of the high school senior class.

The Rev. Berne Oglesby, who was recently chosen pastor of the Sikeston church by members of the congregation, will come here Monday from his home in Decatur, Ill., where for several years he has been minister at the East Park Baptist church. His wife and two young daughters will move into the redecorated parsonage here the following week.

The Rev. Mr. Oglesby will preach his first sermons on March 24.

"I am here, Katusha, with you," he was saying. "I have nothing now but you, and the promise of a new life. You can give me that new life, Katusha, if you will forgive me. Forgive me not only for the wrong I did you, but for all the cruelty and injustice of the world I have been a part of. How can a man truly live until he has tried to undo some of the wrong he has done?" His voice broke. "All that I ask, Katusha, is to live again with your forgiveness and your love and your help."

Then suddenly Dmitri was at her side... his arms were about her... he had not forgotten.

"But I have forgiven you," she said, gently. "Who am I to forgive you? I am not worthy..."

"Not worthy!" he cried. "Not worthy, Katusha! All those who have been crushed and beaten in life are holy, Katusha. Those who suffer the wrongs of world, and are innocent, as you are innocent, Katusha, are holy."

She smiled at him. "Not 'innocent,' Dmitri! I am not the Katusha whom you once loved. Dmitri. That was long ago..."

No, Katusha, that love has not died and will not die. All those wasted years when we were apart have been mistaken and empty. I didn't know it until recently, but all those years, for me, have been a search for the rapture I knew with you..."

A softness—the breaking of dawn—was spreading over the steppes. "The five years," Dmitri said, "will soon be over. Perhaps the days back there—will be able to shorten them. But I shall go on with you, and wait with you, even if it's for all eternity. I love you, Katusha, and I always shall. Believe me..."

She looked into his eyes, in the growing light. "And I...love you, Dmitri," she said, gently. "More today than yesterday, more tomorrow than today."

They embraced, two made one—in one of those fleeting moments of immortality only few fortunate lovers ever know on earth.

The guards were shouting again, anxious to end their cold vigil. The line—heading toward dark Siberia—began to march. Dmitri took his place at Katusha's side, holding her close to him. A woman who had been holding Katusha's bundle started to hand it to her, but Dmitri took it and placed it on his shoulder.

Dmitri looked at Katusha, and she looked at him. Both had exaltation written on their faces. They watched each other tenderly, then forward, then up—and up, through the madly swirling snow, the light of the new day had won through.

"If you go, I shall go with you," he said, quietly.

And she had raised her hands. How she longed to strike him then! But some strange feeling within her had restrained her hands. Some memory, perhaps, of what they had once been to each other. And in a strangled voice she had cried:

"Why have you come back? Why have you made me remember? I had forgotten you. I had been happy enough, and now—

Katusha's chain of thought broke off. The guards were shouting for the long line to move. And with those orders to leave for Siberia—chilling phrase!—Katusha, the cynical, hardened Moscow woman, once again, through some alchemy, became Katusha, the warm, naive, lovely country girl whom Dmitri had loved.

Frantically she looked about her.

When anyone tells you there are no politics in the office of County School Superintendent they are just giving you a bunch of hooey, not Huey. The present superintendent of Scott County was elected as a Republican, is a Republican and may be elected again as a Republican. B. I. Howard is a candidate for Superintendent of Schools on the Democratic ticket and can be elected on that ticket if the Democrats turn out at the April election. This is saying nothing against Frank Anderson, who is a high type gentleman, but he has held the office two terms as a Republican and now a Democrat wants the office. * * *

Garden time is close at hand, and it is to be hoped that our readers will try to have better gardens this year than ever before for no other thing on the farm pays such big returns. And talking of gardens, why not beautify your home premises with a few shrubs and flowers this spring if you can spare the little they cost? I cannot remember the time when I didn't love flowers, and on my farm we have several big peony patches which are a wonderful sight during May, and also I have planted many hardy roses, hydrangeas, lilacs and other hardy flowers, and while there is no occasion for the average farmer to incur as great an outlay as I have, yet several hardy ever-blooming roses such as Pink and Red Radiance and Gruss and Epiloz, and a small space given to zinnias, marigolds, gladiolas, asters, irises, etc., will prove a great joy and cost very little, and then why not plant some hollyhocks along the garden fence or in the back yard? Also if you need some shade trees why not go into the woods and seek out some young elms or sugar maples? It is a mistake for farmers to dismiss flowers, shrubs, etc., as "mere sentiment," and especially if they have children growing up, for what child does not love a pretty home? The more we cultivate a love of a beautiful, the more our thoughts are lifted to higher things, and the better we can endure the hardships of life, and the more we are qualified to appreciate the demand economic justice for ourselves and our loved ones.—William Hirth.

MACHINES HIT HEAD ON TOW CHAIN BREAKS

Only one person, Marvin Lander of Sikeston, received minor cuts and bruises in an automobile-truck head-on collision on Highway 60 west of town Monday evening. Trooper John Tansey, who investigated the accident, said Tuesday. Two others escaped injury.

The truck was being driven west toward Morehouse by A. B. Cargill, who, with his boy companion, was returning to his home at Piggott, Ark., with a load of apples.

Lavender, at the wheel of his Desoto coupe, was being towed east by a truck. As the machines neared a meeting place, the chain connecting the truck and Desoto either became loose and slipped off or broke.

ZIMMERMAN DEMANDS WAGE DIFFERENTIALS

WASHINGTON, March 11—National Recovery Administration authorities were notified today by Representative Zimmerman (Dem.), Missouri, that he would voice "unalterable opposition" to elimination of population wage differentials at a hearing on the reopened boot and shoe code here April 16.

Filing a formal notice of appearance at the hearing, Zimmerman told authorities elimination of the present differentials would "inflict untold injury" to scores of communities in rural Missouri and other parts of the Midwest.

Zimmerman asserted that, years before NRA, unit factories had been established in numerous small Missouri towns and that the labor provided by them had become an all-important factor in the economic life of these towns.

Elimination of any wage differential, he asserted, would cause recentering of the industries in cities and virtually destroy many small communities. The lower wages now offset higher costs attached to rural production, he said.

NEW MADRID COUNTY SCHOOL NEWS

In visiting the Dawson School last week, we observed that the board had just purchased a large Simmons Giant No. 224 stove, which is one of the largest stoves in the rural schools of the county, having a 24-inch bowl which is about one inch in thickness and is fitted with a groove so that no bolts are involved. This means that a new bowl can be easily set in place when necessary. This stove was bought from a local dealer in New Madrid and cost only $63.00. It has no jacket but the jacket from an old stove can be polished up and used again. Since regular jacketed stoves of this size cost from $125.00 to $150.00, you can see that this board made a saving. The school board at Dawson is Albert Ransburgh, Doc Hawkins, and Virgil DeBaun. The teacher is Rexford Sloan.

Miss Georgia Allen, teacher of third and fourth grades at Marston, missed one day last week with an attack of rheumatism, which was the first day of school that she had missed on account of sickness in her fourteen years of teaching. She has been at Marston 7 years.

This week the Marston High School and Faculty is having a class basketball tournament, for which a small admission will be charged and used for the purchase of playground equipment.

Music will be furnished by the Toy Orchestra of the Primary Grades which was trained by Mrs. Elvina Latimer Randolph. J. E. Sexton is superintendent and L. L. Wiseman is coach.

Our new high school supervisor, Byron Masterson, inspected Portageville, New Madrid, Marston, Risco, and Parma last week and expects to finish the county soon.

The Higginson School closed March 1, being the first to finish this year. The writer could not be present on account of teachers' examination, but expects to attend the final exercises of Wilburn on March 15 at 8:00 p. m.; Cade on March 22, basket dinner;

Provide Reading Room

Every home should have a room set aside for reading. One of the best ideas is to partition off a section of the attic. Then build shelves either running half way up the wall or all the way from the ceiling to floor. Shelves half way up provide a place where pictures, radio, or other bits of ornaments can be placed. Another idea growing in popularity is to have a desk built as part of the wall.

"The Devil is a Woman", is the title of a new screen play with Marlene Dietrich as the devil. Still, we old timers have always looked upon women as angels, though we'll admit the picture of Marlene in her costume looks quite devilish. ***

Friends of John W. Adams have missed him from the Whites Drug Store where he was a familiar figure for many years and wondered. Since early December he has been confined to his home with numerous ailments, the worst of which is his heart. He is now bedfast but bearing his sickness with Christian fortitude. On behalf of his friends in Sikeston and vicinity The Standard extends sympathy to him and trusts the good Lord will deal gently with him the balance of his days.

A peculiar accident happened to a good Sikeston mother during the week and she is now taking her meals from the mantelpiece. She was doing some family sewing and was called for some purpose, placing her work in the chair along with a sharp-pointed pair of scissors. Strange to say the scissors became point up in the part of her work, she go up suddenly.

The St. Francis river reached its crest in the Mingo basin at 11 o'clock Wednesday night, but water receded very slowly. The river gauge stood at 26.1 feet early Thursday morning, only .6 of a foot less than it was the night before. According to a report, Highway 60 may possibly be open by this (Friday) morning.

On Route 60 directly east of Poplar Bluff, twenty-two inches of water stood on the pavement while cars were permitted to travel over it slowly. The Black river gauge stood at 16.7 feet. Route SD, used as a detour south from Poplar Bluff was clear by Thursday morning, but Route SE also a southern detour, had twenty-one inches of water, receding slowly. It will possibly be open by this morning.

On Highway 53, about for three miles from a point a mile and a half southeast of Poplar Bluff, three feet of water stood on the road and was receding only slowly Thursday morning. Part of the gravel has been washed away. Mr. Phillips learned, in some places as much as a foot deep. When the highway is opened motorists will be forced to observe one-way traffic regulations while workers repair the road.

Missourians Activities in Washington

By Foust Roper

Washington, March 13—If your holding company stock is worth anything right now, it will be worth just as much after the proposed holding company legislation is passed.

That is about the briefest, clearest way to sum up just what this bitterly fought measure means to the small investor, according to Representative Reuben T. Wood of Springfield.

"Stocks which are not paying dividends now will not pay in the future, regardless of this legislation. They represent nothing but thin air," explained "Rube."

To Protect Investor

"The sole aim and effect of this bill," he continued, "is to protect the investor. It will regulate stock issues so that when an aged person or widow buys a share for $5 she will know that back of that share is $5 worth of machinery and equipment and other physical values.

"In the past many stocks were issued which were not worth the paper they were printed on.

"For instance, we have a light company capitalized at—and worth—$100,000 operating in a small town. A holding company acquires it.

"Now, the holding company proceeds to sell its own stock in it, notwithstanding the fact that stock up to the company's actual value was already issued when this small operating concern was organized. In other words, unsecured, additional stock was sold in an enterprise actually worth only $100,000 originally issued.

"But that was only the beginning! Larger holding companies up the line successively acquired the property and each company issued new stock in it. There could be unlimited issues of stock pyramided on our original $100,000 property.

Consumer Hit, Too

"Such swindling robbed not only the investor but also the consumer. The little company could have charged most reasonably for its power and still have made a good profit if it had only its true value of $100,000 to support. But it had to set extortionate rates to render the tribute each of the holding companies extracted from it.

"Naturally, this bubble was bound to burst. It did, and today many stocks are down to nothing on the market and are paying no dividends. And it has all come about purely because there was nothing behind the stocks.

"And now, every day, letters from small investors are pouring into every office here asking that this bill be defeated. We have the ironical spectacle of victims pleading with congress for the very crooks who sold them watered stocks.

Giving False Hope

"Fly-by-night companies are telling stockholders that dividends about to be declared for the first time in several years cannot be paid if this law is enacted.

"That is a cruel lie. If they haven't been able to pay all along, defeat of this bill will not bring money magically pouring forth. There is no more heinous crime than that of engendering hope in the hearts of desperate people, which is what these companies are doing now.

"There are, of course, some firms which have sold only sound stocks. These securities are paying dividends now and will pay just the same after passage of the bill now before congress. Only the swindlers will suffer.

FEWER HOGS

The outstanding feature in the present hog situation is the very marked reduction in the size of the fall pig crop (June 1 to December 1, 1934). The number of pigs saved during this period in

No Harm to Investors

"There has been every attempt to paint this legislation as a blow to the investor. That is bunk! Those who are holding worthless bonds have already lost their money; they lost it several years ago.

This bill will prevent investors from being cheated in the future. It will guarantee the value of stocks—there will be physical assets behind them or they will not be sold.

Mr. Insull has been quoted as saying his mistakes were of the head and not of the heart.

If that is true, Mr. Insull and all gentlemen of his sort should welcome this law. Under it, mistakes of the head will be prevented and the heart will be untroubled.

Miscellany

The Long-Farley-Johnson-Robinson-and-the-administration war is one of the strongest drawing cards the capitol has ever had. Corridors of the building are lined with those seeking gallery seats, and most members of the senate have been sticking close to their desks in order to hear the nasty things that are being tossed about that staid chamber.

Senator Truman received more than two thousand letters one week-end, while Senator Clark, who has been here longer, was deluged with no fewer than five thousand. Most of the mail nowadays is concerning the prevailing wage question and the just discussed holding company bill.

Townsend letters are gradually thinning out as the country comes to learn of the impossibility of the plan . . . Workmen are touching up the various parks about town, proving that Spring is right on us. It's no small job either, for Washington has 600 odd parks and open spaces.

DUST SEED CORN TO SAVE FROM MOLDING

It is possible to use a dust to treat the seed to reduce this molding and rotting after the corn is planted. In general this dust will improve the corn stand and the yield is increased from two to four bushels to the acre. It is, therefore, a very good insurance because on the average only two ounces to the bushel is required.

This dust is known as "Organic Mercury Dust". It generally comes in one pound cans which will treat eight bushels of seed corn. It may be obtained from drug stores and seed dealers in general here in Scott County and the cost runs about five cents per acre on the average.

The method used to apply it is to take a barrel or other similar utensil, fill half full of corn, add the right amount of dust, and slowly revolve it for about three minutes. Old milk cans are also good. In every case the can should be as tight as possible as the dust will work out if it is not. The principle behind it is to get the seed well covered with this fine dust.

"There are, of course, some firms which have sold only sound stocks. These securities are paying dividends now and will pay just the same after passage of the bill now before congress. Only the swindlers will suffer.

the United States is estimated to be 48 per cent smaller than for the preceding year. The Missouri fall crop is estimated to be 64 per cent below that of 1933.

The significance of these figures lies in the fact that farmers cannot sell a greater number of hogs than the size of the pig crop will supply both slaughter and breeding purposes. This means that Federally inspected slaughter from April 1, to October 1, 1935 is likely to be no more than one-half as large as in that period of 1933.

Considering these short supplies and some increase in consumer purchasing power over last year, the usual seasonal decline during May and June is expected to be less than normal. Furthermore, after the bulk of the 1934 fall pig crop has been marketed hog prices are expected to make further advances to reach a late summer or fall peak which is expected to rise above the peak of this spring.

The fall pig survey reports indicated that farmers are planning a 17 per cent decrease in the number of sows to farrow next spring as compared with the very small number last spring. If these intentions are carried out small market supplies of hogs will be assured for the next 14 months.

WASHABLE WALLS
A GOOD INVESTMENT

Walls covered with washable paper or wallpaper are an excellent investment, especially in kitchens, bathrooms, and children's playrooms. In fact, washable walls are splendid for stairways and all rooms in a home or apartment where children are liable to imprint the surfaces.

In cities and neighborhoods where the air is polluted with soot dust and destructive fumes, walls and ceilings covered with washable paint or wallpaper make it possible to keep the home clean and sanitary at all times at a minimum of expense.

FARMERS MAY BORROW FROM MANY SOURCES

Farmers of the United States have more credit facilities at their command than property owners in cities under the Modernization Program of the Federal Housing Administration.

Around 600 production credit associations have been authorized to make Modernization loans to farmers, under regulations made by the Farm Credit Administration. In order to be eligible for such loans, however, the farmer must own or be in a position to own the class B stock acquired in connection with the general agricultural purpose loan from the association.

These associations are in addition to the banks and other lending institutions authorized by the Federal Housing Administration to extend Modernization Loans to all classes of property owners.

PROTECTION SAVES
WOOD SURFACES

The best of woods are apt to warp after installation. This is due largely to the fact that the surface is covered with a moisture resistant fact while the back is left unprotected.

Whenever the unfinished surfaces are near damp plaster, stucco, concrete, brick or other types of masonry, wood will absorb dampness and expand.

Inasmuch as the coatings on the finished surfaces retard moisture changes on those surfaces, unequal stresses are set up in the wood causing it to assume an abnormal shape. The drier the wood and the more moisture resistant the finish or coatings applied to the face surface of the wood, the greater need there is of protecting the unfinished surfaces from dampness.

The danger of woodwork warping, as a result of moisture absorption on the unfinished surfaces, can be largely eliminated by protecting the unfinished surfaces with paint that assists in preventing moisture absorption by the wood, such as a paint containing aluminum or zinc oxide. One or two coats can be applied, depending on the moisture resistance required.

National Traffic Speed

Having experimented successfully with a law prohibiting the sounding of automobile horns after a specified hour at night, England is to make the even more radical experiment of enforcing a national law which will limit speed throughout England to 30 miles an hour in all congested areas. Local communities will determine what areas they consider congested. The law becomes effective March 18. Part of the plan includes the installation of such warning signs and mechanical traffic guides as the Ministry of Transport may approve. The objective, of course, is standardization throughout the country.

Whether the plan will succeed is problematical. It is meeting vigorous opposition from the powerful Royal Automobile Club and from many communities. One of the difficulties involved is the multiplicity of authority concerned. There is bound to be considerable disagreement as to what stretches of highway come within the classification of congested and what should be exempted. The confusion is not likely to improve the mental attitude of the motorists.

As an experiment, however, it is worth watching. Sentiment for standardization of traffic regulations is growing in this country. It is being urged by automobile associations and encouraged by police authority. That it will ultimately come in some form is unquestionable, but the problems involved and to first be solved before it can come are far more complex than those confronting the pioneering English.

WHAT HAS HAPPENED BEFORE

Katusha Maslova, a poor peasant girl of Russia fell in love with Prince Dmitri Ivanovitch, and bore him two children. Driven out by her home community, she went to Moscow, and got into bad company. On the jury which convicted her of a crime which she didn't commit, sat the Prince. He was lenient. An effort was made to get the decision reversed, but it was futile. So he went to her, begging her for forgiveness. But seeing him again only reopened old wounds for Katusha, and she fled Moscow. The Prince, moved from his life by her tragedy, bid goodbye to the noble woman he was trothed to marry, telling her he, too, was going to Siberia with Katusha, to help mitigate her greater punishment. He came again to see her, to lose her, and desert her, loving him. Moreover, he felt again some of the old ecstasy in him, as he thought of his sweetheart, Katusha Maslova.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

The day of the departure for Siberia had come, and in the foul, smelly prison where Katusha was kept, all was activity. Even the ever-present rats had been frightened into hiding. Finally, the guards came to the cell where Katusha had shared with four other convicts. They entered roughly, and in brusque voices commanded the five women to file out. As the door clanked behind Katusha, she knew it closed one part of her life forever. Well, she was not sorry; it wasn't a good life... selling what one should only give. But, she remembered those days, on the estate, that lovely spring with Dimitri; those warm, happy days of beauty. And she drove them from her thoughts. Silly memories! Girls! Dreams! Nonsense! There was no such thing in Russia. It was all work, or all pain, or all disgrace—for her class.

In the courtyard, she held out her hands for the shackles to be hammered on. They put her small fragile arms on an anvil, and a big man with a heavy mallet put the open rings on, and with two mighty blows, closed them. The woman behind her, put her hands out... and the woman behind her... .

They were all chained to each other, and would be, for the long cold trip to Siberia. No chance to escape. But why would one wish to escape? What was there to escape to? The torment they were leaving to? The torment they were leaving to? Could Siberia be any worse?

Katusha was a woman, and as she stood in the bleak court-yard filled with the clamor of ringing anvils and agonized goodbyes, she couldn't help but think of the promise Dimitri had made to her. He said he would go to Siberia with her. She remembered his words, and remembered, with a little pang how she mocked them.

"I'm trying to get you pardoned, Katusha," he had said, earnestly, if I succeed, well and good. If I don't, I shall follow you to Siberia. I shall follow you—help you—work for you."

Wronged Girl Relents

She had laughed at him, shouted at him: "You! You go to Siberia! There is no pleasure there. And money won't do you any good! Go back to your princesses—and your estates—and your silk shirts—and your soft bed—"

"—If you go, I shall go with you," he said, quietly.

And she had raised her hands. Her fingers had struck him then. But some strange feeling within her had restrained her hands. Some memory, perhaps, of what they had once been to each other. And in a strangled voice she had cried:

"Why have you come back? Why have you made me remember? I had forgotten you. I had been happy—happy enough. The dead are not unhappy. And now—"

Katusha's chain of thoughts broke off. Her hands, still shouting for the long line to move on, with those orders to leave for Siberia—chilling phrase!—Katusha, the cynical, hardened Moscow woman, once again, through some alchemy, became Katusha, the warm, naive, lovely country girl whom Dimitri had loved.

Frantically she looked about her.

"But I have forgiven you," she said, gently. "Who am I to forgive you? I am not worthy..."

"Not worthy!" he cried. "Not worthy, Katusha! All those who have been crushed and beaten in life are holy, Katusha. Those who suffer the wrongs of world, and are innocent, as you are innocent, are holy."

He smiled at him. "Not innocent, Dimitri! I am not the Katusha whom you once loved. Dimitri. That was long ago..."

"No Katusha, that love has not died and will not die. All those years when we were apart have been broken and empty. I didn't know it until recently, but all those years, for me, have been a search for the rapture I knew with you."

A softness—the breaking of dawn—was spreading over the steppes.

"The five years," Dimitri said. "I will soon be over. Perhaps they—back there—will be able to shorten them. But I shall go on with you and wait with you, even if it's for all eternity. I love you, Katusha, and I always shall. Believe me..."

She looked into his eyes, in the growing light. "And I... love you, Dimitri," she said, gently. "More today than yesterday, more tomorrow than today."

They embraced, two made one—in one of those fleeting moments of immortality only few fortunate lovers ever know on earth.

The guards were shouting again, anxious to end their cold vigil. The line—heading towards dark Siberia—began to march. Dimitri took his place at Katusha's side, holding her close to him. A woman who had been holding Katusha's bundle started to hand it to her, but Dimitri took it and placed it on his shoulder.

Dimitri looked at Katusha, and she looked at him. Both had exaltation written on their faces. They watched each other tenderly, then forward, then up—and up, where through the madly swirling snow, the light of the new day had won through.

GARRISON TO DELIVER LAST SERMON SUNDAY

On Sunday the Rev. Leslie Garrison will preach his last two sermons as pastor of the First Baptist church. Shortly afterward he will go to Vanduser, where he will conduct a week's revival.

This meeting, he said, will be followed by one of two or three weeks in St. Louis and by several revivals in Illinois towns.

Rev. Mr. Garrison will not conduct a meeting here before he leaves, as he originally planned.

Until the close of school, Mrs. Garrison and Miss Allane Garrison will remain in Sikeston. Then they will join Mr. Garrison. Miss Garrison is a member of the high school senior class.

The Rev. Berne Oglesby, who was recently chosen pastor of the Sikeston church by members of the congregation, will come here Monday from his home in Decatur, Ill., where for several years he has been minister at the East Park Baptist church. His wife and two young daughters will move into the redecorated parsonage here the following week.

MEN WORK 24 HOURS TO GET TRUCK FROM DITCH

Almost twenty-four hours were required to pull a large Hussman & Roper truck from a Highway 61 ditch, where it slid during the rain early Monday morning.

Olaf Bundy of St. Louis was driving the truck to Memphis when the accident happened at about 1:30 Monday morning. Fifteen miles south of here he met another car being driven too near the center of the pavement, he said, and to avoid striking it, he turned slightly to the right.

One wheel slipped onto the muddy shoulder, however, and before Bundy could regain the highway, the truck slid through the mud and turned over on its side in the water-filled ditch. Bundy was not hurt.

Trooper John Tandy, who was called at 3:30 Monday morning, remained at the scene of the accident until noon, directing traffic and working in the rain with garage employees and other men who tried unsuccessfully to dislodge the large truck from the mud. At 12 o'clock Trooper Tandy was relieved by Trooper Howard Turnbull, who stayed on the highway until workers stopped late Monday night. The truck was pulled from the ditch Tuesday morning.

Most of the truck's load of miscellaneous goods, including suitcases, Easter novelties, shoe polish, and hair shampoo, was badly damaged by water. Articles which were still dry after the accident were placed in a small truck and taken to New Madrid, where they were temporarily stored.
